Bunnar, May 14, 1865.

The stock market was semewhat unpetited and drooping during the past week, aspecially at the close, who here was a pressure to sell both by bulls, who were saying to uplead and down oad, and bears, who anticipated lower prices anxious to unlosd, and bears, who anticipated lower prices during the ensuing week. Apprehensions of a more ac-tive money market, in consequence of Treasury drafts upon the seven-thirty loan agents, increased the matural heaviness of the market. But loans were made freely at five per cent on Saturday, with exceptional transactions at four and six. At the evening board Eric sold at 78%, Rock Island 95% a 90, Cleveland and Pittsbury 64, New York Central 90%, Hudson River 101%, Fort Wayne 94%, Michigan Southern 62, Ohio and Mississippi certificates 26%, Cumberland 39%, Quicksilver 56, Governnent securities submitted to a decline, owing to the low-rice of dve-twenties abroad and the further fall of gold, which sold late last night at 130%, as against 143% at the same hour on the previous Saturday night.

The market for gold was excited at intervals during the eck under a bear pressure, but otherwise it was rather sterling at sixty days.

The enormous subscriptions to the seven-thirty loan, together with the decline of the gold premium to a lower point than it has reached since September, 1863, indicate a state of public feeling with regard to the finances of the country which presents a gratifying contrast to the gloomy distrust preceding the decisive events of the war. Not, however, that the price of gold is a correct indicator of the public credit; but if reflects public opinion more or less in its general course. Since Sherman entered Savannah speculation in gold has been almost entirely on the bear side. The mon who had before run tirely on the bear side. The mon who had before run the premium up as high as they could, have been since idustriously running it down as far and as fast as they With them it has been pure speculation; but it is rould sa rifice a good deal for the sake of seeing green-acks appreciate rapidly to par. They are indignant hink a debt of twenty-six hundredimillions, which will ting more than nine bundred millions of currency to value equivalent to the same amount in ecce. They overlook figures, and talk like boys, who, having lost or spent their money, think they ought still to have it; and if gold went to par they would insist that, with our resources, it ought to be at a discount. There is no reason, but a good deal of spired by the best of motives; only it may safely be regarded as premature. Not being political economists, to reach the millennium in a day, and they treat precedents in history as entirely inapplicable to come own case.

This cheerful view of the financial future not unnatu-rally accompanies the ciation which was followed the herefore, apt to be much more sanguine than circumunknown to any other nation, all the elements of national wealth and greatness; but time and labor are necessary for their development, just as time and taxa-ion are necessary for the resumption of species cipal of the national debt. It cannot be said ed our strength and nationality, and we see this s much in our financial history as in anything else. At very difficult for the government to borrow money as it had always been before. When, to provide for the war of 1812, Congress authorized, in March of that less than one-third of the six millions which were put on the market were subscribed for by the people, the rest ing five millions issued in Treasury notes. When, in January, 1813, Congress authorized a further six per cent oan of sixteen millions, it was the largest sum ever asked for by the United States; but at the last Congress as a day were reported during last week. The best oan of seven and a half millions in August, 1813, was ring the first year of the war it borrowed only $23, 976,912 The banking capital of the whole country was than $100,000,000, including Treasury notes. But now the national banks alone have a capital of $264,811,020 and a circulation of a hundred and twenty-seven millions, while on the 1st of January, 1863, the State banks,

The banks, excepting those of New England, sus pended in 1813, and specie rose to a premium of eight er cent, from which it progressed to twenty-two per ent before the announcement of peace in February while government accurities rose from $76 to $88 in coin to the hundred dollars in bonds, and general bankruptey ensued. The population of North and South in that year was only nine millions, including a million and a half of slaves. The total debt of the government at the time of peace was but a hundred and nine millions, showing an increase during the The difficulties which had been thrown in the way of the government borrowing money by the federal or peace party were very great. A Boston newspaper said, in 1814;—"Any federalisi who lends mency to the gov-ernment will be called infamous," and a large portion of the press and pulpit speke in a similar strain. It was doemed necessary in Boston for brokers who had gov ernment loans to sell to advertise that the names of subscribers would be kept secret; and in February, 1815, in that city twenty thousand dollars of United States six per cent stock was offered at auction, and only five thousand of it taken, and that at ferly per cent below par. Boston, by a combination of New England capital. had been made the financial centre of the country, and the New England banks bad drained the Middle and Southern States as much as possible of their specie to prevent their subscribing to the public loans. Yet at the time that this drain was be gun the Massachusetts banks had two and a balt dollars in specie in their vanits for every dollar of their circula tion. The result of this was that in February, 1815, the notes of the banks of New York State were 19 to 20 per cent below par; these of Philadelphia 24, and those of Baltimore 30, while Treasury notes were 24 to 25, and

After the war a sudden increase of trade took place, and the customs duties in 1815, which were estimated to yield only four millions, produced twenty-five millions to the revenue. The banks which had suspended were opposed to the resumption of specie payment; but on the 26th of September, 1816, they began to pay colu for sums of less than one dollar. The second United States Bank was established soon afterwards, and, although it nearly bankrupted the entire country, it preserved the govern-ment credit, and before the close of 1825 the publie debt had been reduced to seventy-three millions. On the 3d of March in that year Congress passed a law reducing the rate of interest on twelve millions of the six per cent stock to four and a half per cent; and in 1832 there was a surplus of no less shan forty millions in the treasury. When we review she history of this struggling period with that of the last four years it sinks into insignificance, and the extent of our national progress becomes apparent. Of our future our national progress becomes apparent. Of our future prosperity and greatness there can be no doubt; but meanwhile the payment of the interest and principal of a debt of three thousand millions will heavily tax our resources, and it will require she patient and stemmons of forts of one generation at least, even if all be willing to unite in the task, which it is by no means certain they will be, for time brings changes, and the mutations of opinion are rapid. the 28th uit. It is an answer to an article which appeared in that paper of a previous date animadverting upon the debt of this country, and in an underhand manner questioning its shiftly to meet its obligations:—

Reverse Curm, April 28, 1865.

In an elaborate notice in the city article of the Times of this morning, a severe animadversion is made upon the debt of the United States, in which you draw conclusions so unfavorable to this security that, as one interested, I deem it right in fairness to ask the insertion of a few lines in reply. You state the debt of that country now contracted will, with its obligations, amount to the sum of five hundred millions of pounds sterling, on which you assume an interest will be required of six per cent. This amount of the capital debt I believe to be an overestimate, and it is scarcely fair to assume that a State whose public debt prior to the war was almost always at a premium in the noney markets of the world should, when that country is at peace, be longisted to pay an interest of six per cent. But, without cavilling as to the amounts, the great question is whether the debt of the United States will, when this war is at an end, bear so heavely on the resources of that nation that it cannot reasonably be expected to be paid. In order to arrive at a correct conclusion on this point it is useful to compare the resources of the United States with those of England at the close of the great war of 1815, when she had accumulated Ent vast obligation called the national debt of eight hundred millions. At that time the population of Great Britain and Ireland may be estimated to have been nuncteen millions. The population of the United States was in 1846 31,445,000, and, with the ratio of increase them maintained of thirty-due per cont for the ten years preceding, it may be assumed to be in 1870 42,000,000.

The want of statistical data makes it difficult to discover what in 1856 we had the true value of the real estate and presonal property of the United States amounted in 1860

ISSO to 1850 being at the rate of one hundred and twenty-six and one half per cent, with a constantly increasing ratio.

Now, comparing the circumstances of the two countries of England and the United States when each had accumulated its debt, it must be evident how immensely superior America is to bear the burden imposed. Be it remembered how few in 1815 were the implements of labor. Now steam with its enormous influence, multiplies almost infinitely the wealth producing capacity of the world. If, without the aid of steam, the English nation could bear a debt of eight hundred inflions, what must now be the resources of that country which had at its command in 1860 30,692 miles of railway constructed, and has many others since that time completed, including the Atlantic and Great Western Railway, stretching its great arm through three of the richest States of the Union—a country which has steam vessels to navigate its lakes and rivers, thousands of miles of telegraph, reaping machines superior to any in the world, and sufficient to gather the agricultural produce which in the last published official returns resulted from one hundred and aixty-three inflition aeres of cultivated lands. Without "drenching you with statistics," it may be stated, as the opinion of the late Mr. Cobden, that taking into account the vasity increasing wealth-producing power of that country, its mines, its millions of aeres of uncoupled lands, its steam power, its telegraphs, together with the labor-saving appliances which modern accence and invention now contribute to the wonderful energy of its people, America has be titines the means to pay her indebt doesn't after the first on the return of peace in 1815, she counted the cost of her own wars.

CAUGHT IN BAD COMPANY—ROBERTY—THE TREASURB RECOVERED, ETC.

A day or two since Mr. Daniel Absarne, connected with a well known dry goods house of this city, called on Bryan McSweeny, a merchant doing business at 318
Pearl street, he having been acquainted with him for some months. They imbibed freely, after which the Pearl street merchant invited Absarne to accompany him some months. They imbled freely, after which the Pearl street merchant invited Ahearne to accompany him to Brooklyn. During the passage across the river it is alleged that McSweeny relieved Ahearne of government bonds to the amount of $550. Ahearne seen missed his money, and asked his companion if he had taken it, to which McSweeny indignantly replied in the nesative. The victim subsequently laid the case before Captain Thorne, of the Fourth precinct, who directed officers Mullen and Horbelt to agreet McSweeny, and make a thorough investigation of the metter. After his arrest the prisoner stoully denied having Abearne's money, but Captain Thorne and his officers resorted to a piece of strategy which worked admirably. They informed McSweeny that the stolen bonds were registered and could not be made available to any one except Ahearne. This throw the prisoner off his guard, and conducting the officers to his promises, 318 Pearl street, a search was made, and the missing bonds were found secreted ander one of the front windows. Ahearne's troubles, however, did not end with the loss and recovery of his money. After his return from Brooklyn he went to the house 103½ Churry street, where McSweeny is to the house 103½ Churry street, where 100 and the property of the prisoner stock, and the gave it to John Haley. He was also arrested, and the stolen timepiece found in his possession. Justica Dowling, before whom the pleanners McSweeny, Lynch and Haley were arrangeed, committed them to the Tombs for trial without balt. Pearl street merchant invited Ahearne to accompany him

James Gill, a native of Hallfax; forty years of age, wa street. When discovered Gill ran away, but was pursued and overtaken by Mr. Vickers, who passed the offender to the custody of officer Holmes, of the Second precinct. Justice Dowling committed the prisoner to the Tombs for trial in default of one thousand dollars bail.

He was followed and arrested by officer Collins, of the Fifth precipict. Justice Dowling committed the secused in de-fault of one thousand dollars bath.

RECKLESS DRIVING -- RUNNING OVER A CHILD. Frederick Schauer, a German, was arrested by officer Waller, of the First precinct, charged with reckless driving, in running over a little boy three years of age, driving, in running ever a flute boy three years of age, son of Michael Keegan, residing at No. 1 Whitehall street, injuring him very seriously. Schauer is the driver of a milk wagon, and while the wheel of his vehicle was passing over the neck of the child John Stiles spoke to him and asked why he did not look where he was driving, when the accused replied in broken English, and started off. Justice Dowling committed Schauer for examination.

City Intelligence. ORSEQUES OF COLONEL JOHN S. AUSTIN, SEVENTY-SECOND

REGIMENT N. Y. V.—The funeral of the late Colonel John S. Austin took place between two and three o'clock yes terday afternoon, from the City Hall. The remains had been placed in the Governor's foom early in the morning, and were exposed to the public view from ten o'clock until the hour for their removal to the hearse. The coffin containing the corpse was laid in the main spot, just opposite the main entrance. It was a brasifial malogany structure, covered with heavy black velvet, and studded with silver diamond-shaped clasps. On the life were placed the last and sword of the deceased, and also some emblems of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was an honered member. A beautiful floral cross and a wreath of the same material were also among the decorations of the coffin. On the plate was the following inscription:—

COLONEL JOHN S. AUSTIN.

The features of the deceased presented a most life-like appearance, the color not having yet left the face, though his death occurred last Monday. About half-past two o'clock religious cerumonies were performed over the remains by the Rev. Mr. Wild, who likewise delivered a heirel discourse, speaking in the highest terms of the character of the deceased colonel. The family and friends then took their last leave of the departed, after which the colin was closed and conveyed to the hears. The remains were taken to Greenwood Cemetery, followed by Amity Lodge, F. A. M., the John Austin Association, and a large train of mourners.
